ENGLISH PREFACE

This is a dictionary of the Muyuw dialect of the eastern end of Woodlark Island in the Milne Bay District of Papua New Guinea. There are 700 speakers of this dialect. Closely related dialects of the rest of Woodlark and the Marshall Bennett Islands are grouped together linguistically as the Muyuw language, with a total population of 3,000. This material has been gathered and checked by David and Daphne Lithgow of the Papua New Guinea Branch of the Summer Institute of Linguistics during the period 1964 to 1973. The authors wish to acknowledge the invaluable assistance given by many people from Wabunun village, especially Teilep, Kolel, Kuwabu, Tomim, Ayis, Omen, and also Misklomin from Wayavat village.

The Muyuw-English data was reversed by the computer of the Mathematics Dept., of the University of Papua New Guinea; and this assistance is gratefully acknowledged. The final typing of this dictionary was done by Ruth Ball of Melbourne, whose painstaking work is gratefully acknowledged.

An additional help in defining the central meanings of words, and in finding suitable examples of word usage, came from study of the computerised text of 20,000 words which was produced by a joint project of the Oklahoma University Research Institute and the Summer Institute of Linguistics, and was partially supported by Grant GS-270 of the National Science Foundation.

We have endeavoured to make this dictionary accurate, and to include all of the most common words. If readers find mistakes, or important words which have been left out, we would like you to tell us about them.

We hope that this dictionary will help Muyuw people who are learning English, as well as English speakers who wish to learn Muyuw.

ENGLISH INTRODUCTION

ALPHABET

(a) Vowels

There are eight Muyuw vowels. These are listed below in phonetic symbols with a list of words which have a similar vowel sound in Australian English. In the third column are listed the letters which are used to represent these sounds in Muyuw.

i	beat	i
e	bet	ei
ɛ	bear	e
ʌ	but	a
a	barter	ə
ɔ	bought	o
o	boat	ou
u	boot	u

Of the a and a vowels, a never occurs in a closed syllable at the end of a word. In this position the vowel is always a, but because the sound is constant we do not put a bar under it. So it is written a in this position, and represents a. This dictionary was alphabetised by a computer which read a as aa, so a precedes a except when a is word-final.

It is essential to stress the right vowel in a word. For instance túwan	"his older brother"

tuwán	"his older brothers" imóm	"he drank it" (transitive)
ímoum	"he is drinking" (intransitive)

Stress is indicated in this dictionary, but we do not write it in Muyuw books.

People from outside of Muyuw call the language Murua. In one old book it is spelt Múyua. The phonetic pronunciation is móyuw, and it should be spelt Mouyuw, but we spell it Muyuw. Another spelling which is used is Muyuwa. Words rarely have final vowels in normal speech, but they may be added for emphasis. Unstressed vowels are frequently dropped, especially from long words. If the prefixes i- and la- are added to the word badúbad, it becomes ilbdúbad. The word for "all of us" in Kilivila language is yakidasi, but in Muyuw it is yákids.

Unstressed vowels in the early syllables of long words may be dropped completely or partially. A partially dropped vowel has an indeterminate sound which is hard to identify. Different speakers vary in the way in which they pronounce these words, some dropping the vowel completely, some pronouncing it fairly clearly, and others using an unclear indeterminate sound. It is difficult to decide how to spell such words in the dictionary. Distinctions which are difficult to decide when a vowel is unstressed are between a, i, and u; aw and ou; ay and ei; wa and o; a and e. It is also difficult to distinguish a from a when it is followed by y or w.

(b) Consonants

These are b, bw, d, g, gw, k, kw, l, m, mw, p, pw, s, t, v, w and y. Europeans find it difficult to hear the labialisation in the bw, pw, gw, kw and mw series, and it is left out of many names on the map.

e.g. Mwadaw is spelt Madau,

Mapwas is spelt Mapas,

Dikwayas is spelt Dikoias.

It is almost impossible to hear labialisation at the end of a word, especially when a word ends with mw. We have omitted the writing of labialisation at the end of words, and this has not caused any serious problems, though some people recognize that something is missing, and have told us so. We have included the word-final labialisation in brackets in the listing of words in the dictionary, but not in the examples. Thus in the dictionary we have listed yam(w) day

but in the examples it is spelt yam, which is the spelling used in the Muyuw books we have published.

NOUNS

(a) Possession affixes

There are three sets of affixes which indicate intimate, intermediate or distant mode of possession. The intimate affixes are suffixes, while the intermediate and distant affixes are prefixes. Nouns are divided into classes by the set of affixes by which they are usually possessed, though some nouns can be possessed in two or more different ways, and we have seen one noun possessed simultaneously in two ways - agu-nama-n

my(for eating)-arm-its which means "the arm of an animal which I will eat."

The following table shows the sets of affixes:-

PERSON	INTIMATE	INTERMEDIATE	DISTANT
1st sing.	-g(w)	agu- or ag-	guna- or gun-
2nd sing.	-m(w)	amu- or am-	mu- or imu-
3rd sing.	-n	ana- or an-	na- or ina-
1st du. incl.	-d	ada- or ad-	da- or ida-
1st pl. incl.	-ds	ada- or ad- plus -s suffix	da- or ida- plus -s suffix
1st pl. excl.	-m	ama-	ma- or ima-
2nd pl.	-miy	ami-	mi- or imi-
3rd pl.	-s	asi- or as-	si- or isi-

For the intimately possessed nouns, the non-inclusive plural forms have a change in stress in the noun stem, which may be accompanied by vowel changes, as illustrated below nim hand

nama- is the root when possessed námag(w) my hand

námam(w) your hand

náman his hand

námad our hands (you and I) námads our hands (all of us) nimém our hands, but not yours nimámiy your hands

nimés their hands

kákei- is the root for "leg" when possessed kákeig(w) my leg

kákeim(w) your leg

káken his leg

kákeid our legs (you and I) kákeids our legs (all of us) kikém our legs, but not yours kikéimiy your legs

kikéis their legs

Intermediate possession can be illustrated as follows

kweim clothing

águkweim my clothing

ámkweim your clothing

ánakweim his clothing

ádakweim our clothing (you and I) ádakweims our clothing (all of us) ámakweim our clothing, but not yours ámikweim you (pl.) clothing ásikweim their clothing

Distant possession can be illustrated as follows

	bunáatum	house
gun	bunáatum	my house
mubu	náatum	your house
na	bunáatum	his house
da	bunáatum	our house (you and I) da	bunáatum	our house (all of us)
ma	bunáatum	our house (but not yours)
mi	bunáatum	your house
si	bunáatum	their house

In the dictionary common nouns will be illustrated with their most usual possessed forms.

There are two nouns which do not follow the usual pattern of possession. They are kan ("food") and son ("his company").

Kan is literally "his food"; and is the general word for "yams". It is possessed as follows:

kag(w)	my food
kam(w)	your food
kan	his food
kads	our food (all of us)
kaem	our food (but not yours)
kaeimiy	your (pl.) food
kaeis	their food

Son which means "his company" can often be translated by the English word "with".

e.g. Ikámkwam kan son in.

He is eating yam, its company fish.
(He is eating yam with fish).

It is possessed as follows:

soug(w)	my companion
soum(w)	your companion

son	his companion
sod	the companion of you and I sods	the companion of all of us siméy	the companion of us but not you simiy	your (pl.) companion
sisiy	their companion

For plural company or companions there is further affixation and vowel change

SINGULAR	PLURAL
soug(w)	sigwéy
soum(w)	simwéy
son	sinéy
sods	sidéyas
siméy	siméyas
simiy	simiyas
sisiy	sisiy or sisiyas

(b) Plural nouns

Some nouns have a collective plural form

gwad	child
gamágal	children

Occasionally the suffix -s is added to indicate that a noun is plural. This is an important feature of the Budibud language, but it is not commonly used in Muyuw.

Usually the same form is used for singular and plural, and hearers know by the context what is meant.

In the dictionary most nouns will be illustrated with their most usual possessed forms.

Intransitive verb stems can function as a noun. Some intransitive stems are formed by adding -ay to the transitive stem.

VERBS

(a) Subject affixes

These are as follows:

a-	I
ku-	you (singular)
i-	he, she, it
ta-	you and I (1st inclusive dual) ta-(stem)-s	all of us (1st inclusive plural) ka-	we but not you (1st exclusive plural)
ku-(stem)-s	you (plural)
i-(stem)-s	they

They can be illustrated with the stem livan, which means "speak".

alívan	I speak
kulívan	you speak
ilívan	he speaks
talívan	you and I speak
talívans	we all speak
kalívan	we(exclusive) speak kulívans	you all speak
ilívans	they speak

(b) Transitive verbs and object suffixes

For an intransitive verb to become transitive, the stress moves to the final syllable of the stem, and a final stem vowel is added before the -s 'plural' suffix.

aliván	I say it
kuliván	you say it
iliván	he says it
taliván	you and I say it
talivánes	we all say it

kaliván	we(exclusive) say it kulivánes	you all say it
ilivánes	they say it

For the third person singular object there is no suffix, but there are suffixes for the first and second singular person, and for all the plural forms. They are:

-g(w)	me
-m(w)	you (singular)
-nil	him, her, it
-d	you and me
-ds	all of us
-m	us (exclusive)
-miy	you (plural)
-s	them

There are vowel changes with some verb stems when they take object suffixes, illustrated by seke- which means "give to".

iseikeig(w)	he gives to me iseikeim(w)	he gives to you (sing.)
isek	he gives to him
iseikeid	he gives to us (incl. dual) ideikeids	he gives to us (incl. pl.) isekem	he gives to us (exclusive) iseikeimiy	he gives to you (pl.)
isekes	he gives to them

It will be noted that when the final vowel is ei it influences the preceding e so that it becomes ei. If the preceding vowel is o, it influences it so that it will become ou. Because these changes are automatic we only indicate the changes in the final vowel, and the preceding vowel is always written as e or o, and it can be determined when it should be pronounced.

ei or ou. We write the suffixed forms of seke-isekeig

isekeim isek isekeid isekeids
isekem isekeimiy
isekes

(c) Plural subjects of transitive verbs

For transitive verbs, plural subjects are indicated by a -s suffix, except for those with a second and third plural object, or a first inclusive plural object. In these cases no -s suffix is added, and the difference between singular and plural subjects is not indicated, thus:

iséikeigws	they give to me iséikeimws	they give to you isékes	they give to him iséikeids	they give to us (incl. dual) iséikeids	they give to us (incl. pl.)
isékemas	they give to us (excl.)
iséikeimiy	they give to you (pl.) isékes	they give to them.

We spell these words as follows:

isekeigs isekeims
isekes
isekeids
isekeids
isekemas

isekeimiy

isekes

(d) Real and unreal aspects

The prefix for real aspect is n- or occasionally m-. It means that the action has really happened. The unreal prefix b- is for actions which have not happened. There are certain vowel modifications for second and first exclusive persons with all verbs, and vowel changes for some plural stems. These changes are best explained with examples. Thus with sesu- "stays", we have:

nasés	I stay	basés	I will stay
nukusés	you stay	bukusés	you will stay
nisés	he stays	bisés	he will stay
nitasés	you and I stay	bitasés	you and I will stay
nitasásus	we all stay	bitasásus	we all will stay
nakasés	we(excl.)stay	bakasés	we(excl.)will stay
nukusásus	you all stay	bukusásus	you(pl.)will stay
nisásus	they stay	bisásus	they will stay

Because sasus means "drink milk from the breast" as well as "stay", we spell it sesus for "stay" to avoid the confusion which does occur when they are spelt in the same way. Thus the words listed above are spelt:

nases	bases
nukuses	bukuses
nises	bises
nitases	bitases
nitasesus	bitasesus
nakases	bakases
nukusesus	bukusesus
nisesus	bisesus

For intransitive verbs of one syllable the stress falls on the subject prefix and causes it to change from i to ei in the third person, when the verb has a real or unreal aspect marker.

ímóum he is drinking

béímóum he will drink

béímóums they will drink

However for the first person singular and first exclusive plural, the prefix vowel changes from a to a whether there is an aspect marker or not.

ákam I am eating

bákam I will eat

kákam we are eating

bakákam we will eat

Stems like kam which begin with ka or ga change to the labialised form if preceded by the vowel u.

ku + kam = kukwam you eat agu + gamag = agugwamag my person or relative

Many long verb-stems begin with ka, and they become cumbersome when preceded by ku-, buku- and nuku- prefixes. Elision may occur as follows:

ku + kátunags = kukwátunags ("you get ready") which is often pronounced kwátunags buku + kátunags = bukukwátunags ("you will get ready") often pronounced bukwátunags similarly nukwátunags for "you are ready".

(e) Continuous mode

The verb stem is reduplicated if an action is continuous, especially if it involves many people. The reduplication is partial or complete, and is different for transitive and intransitive verbs. These are variations in the pattern of reduplication for different kinds of verb stems, but the following are common patterns:

ívag	he is doing
ívags	they are doing
ivávags	they keep doing ivág	he does it
ivág es	they do it ivvág es	they keep doing it

íbas	he spears
ibsíbas	they are spearing
ibés	he spears it
ibibés	he is spearing it ibibásis	they are spearing it

íkil	she dips water
ikilíkil	she keeps dipping water

Verbs in common use will be illustrated with affixes in this dictionary, but the continuous mode is not usually listed.
